"Well," he said, slowly detaching Gracia's fingers and putting her hand away.

As Phil ran forward to greet them he stepped sullenly off to one side. What they said he did not know, for his mind was suddenly a blank; but when Phil rushed over, and wrung his hand he came back to earth with a start.

"Dud!" cried De Lancy ecstatically, "how can I ever thank you enough! You brought her back to me, didn't you, old man? Thank God you're safe—I've been watching for you with glasses ever since I heard you had started! I knew you would do it, pardner; you're the best friend a man ever had! But—say, come over here a minute—I want to speak to you."

He led Hooker off to one side, while Gracia watched them with jealous eyes, and lowered his voice as he spoke.

"It was awful good of you, Bud," he whispered, "but I'm afraid you've got in bad! The whole town is crazy about it. Old Aragon came up on the first train, and now they're wired that you killed Del Rey. By jove, Bud, wasn't that pulling it a little strong? Captain of the rurales, you know—the whole Mexican government is behind him—and Aragon wants you for kidnaping!"

"What's that?" demanded Gracia, as she heard her own name spoken. Bud looked at Phil, who for once was at a loss for words, and then he answered slowly.

"Your father is down at the station," he said, "looking for you." "Well, he can't have me!" cried Gracia defiantly. "I'm across the line now! I'm free! I can do what I please!"

"But there's the immigration office," interposed Phil pacifically. "You will have to go there—and your father has claimed you were kidnaped!" "Ha! Kidnaped!" laughed Gracia, who had suddenly recovered her spirits. "And by whom?"

"Well—by Bud here," answered De Lancy hesitatingly.

Gracia turned as he spoke and surveyed Hooker with a mocking smile. Then she laughed again.

"Never mind," she said, "I'll fix that. I'll tell them that I kidnaped him!"

"No, but seriously!" protested De Lancy, as Bud chuckled hoarsely. "You can't cross the line without being passed by the inspectors, and—well, your father is there to get you back."

"But I will not go!" flung back Gracia.

"Oh, my dear girl!" cried De Lancy, frowning in his perplexity, "you can't understand, and you make it awful hard for me. You know there's very strict law—so many law women coming across the line, for—well, the fact is, unless you are married you can't come in at all!"

"But I'm in!" protested Gracia, flushing hotly. "I'm—"

"They'll deport you," said De Lancy, stepping forward to give her support.

"I know it's hard, dear," he went on, as Bud moved hastily away, "but I've got it all arranged. Why should we wait? You came to marry me, didn't you? Well, you must do it now—right away! I've got the license and the priest all waiting—come on before the sun goes back to town and report that you've crossed the line. We can ride around to the north and come in at the other side of town. Then we—"

"Oh, no, no!" cried Gracia, pushing him impudently aside. "I am not ready now. And—"

She paused and glanced at Bud. "Mr. Hooker," she began, walking gently toward him, "what will you do now?"

"I don't know," answered Hooker.

"Will you come with us—will you?"

"No," said Bud, shaking his head slowly.

"Then I must say good-by?" She waited, but he did not answer. "You have been so good to me," she went on, "so brave, and—have I been brave, too?" she broke in pleadingly.

Hooker nodded his head, but he did not meet her eyes.

"Ah, yes," she sighed. "You have heard what Phil has said. I wish now that my mother were here, but—would you mind? Before I go I want to—give you a kiss!"

She reached out her hands impulsively and Hooker started back. His eyes, which had been downcast, blazed suddenly as he gazed at her, and then they flitted to Phil.

"No," he said, and his voice was lifeless and choked.

"You will not?" she asked, after a pause.

"No!" he said again, and she shrank away before his glance.

"Then good-by," she murmured, turning away like one in a dream, and Bud heard the crunch of her steps as she went toward the horses with Phil. Then, as the tears welled to his eyes, he heard a resounding slap and a rush of approaching feet.

"No!" came the voice of Gracia, vibrant with indignation. "I say no!" The spat of her hand rang out again and then, with a piteous sobbing, she came running back to Bud, halting with the stiffness of her long ride.

"I hate you!" she screamed, as Phil came after her. "Oh, I hate you! No, you shall never have the kiss! What if Bud here has refused it, will I give a kiss to you? Ah, you poor, miserable creature!" she cried, wheeling upon him in a sudden fit of passion. "Were you were you when I was in danger? Where were you when there was no one to save me? And did you think, then, to steal a kiss, when my heart was sore for Bud? Ah, coward! You are no fit partner! No, I will never marry you—never! Well, go then! And hurry! Oh, how I hate you—to try to steal me from Bud!"

She turned and threw her arms about Hooker's neck and drew his rough face down to her.

"You do love me, don't you, Bud?" she sobbed. "Oh, you are so good—so brave! and now will you take the kiss?"

"Try me!" said Bud.

THE END

The Koran.

In a recent number of the London Everyman is a review of the Koran and its author Mohammed. It is a man's book, and that man not an imaginative one, but essentially a man of action and lacking in invention.

The Koran is a jumbled mass of precepts, doctrines, threats, injunctions, divine commands, narrative, lyric and epic poetry. Its heaven and hell are too material for modern thought.

"Obviously," says Everyman, "the Koran is meant not to be read with the eye, but to be recited, when the repetitions are not nearly so pronounced. It reflects a social order, a system of ideas as remote from Rome and more especially from Greece, as our own are from the North American Indian.

But neither time nor evolution can utterly quench the flame of Mohammed's personality, which carried his followers to reckless excesses to the sovereignty of empires which created an art peculiar to Islam, and founded age-long traditions."

The Case of L. L. Cantelero.

The case of L. L. Cantelero, Clarendon, Texas, is similar to that of many others who have used Chas. Berlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy. He says, "After trying a doctor for several months, and using different kinds of medicine for six weeks which had been troubled with severe bowel complaint for several months, I bought a 25c bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera, and Diarrhoea Remedy. After using the second bottle she was entirely cured." For sale by all dealers.

MAKE A PROTEST.

Foreign Residents in Belgium Do Not Like Bombs Dropped Upon Them.

Antwerp, Aug. 26.—Via Paris, 10 p. m.—The ministers of the foreign powers at Antwerp have protested against the bombardment of Antwerp by a Zeppelin. A building owned by an American citizen was destroyed.

All lights at Antwerp are out at 8 o'clock at night. The only communication with the outside world is through Ostend.

W. T. Greene, Hopkinton, N. H., writes the following letter which will interest every one who has kidney trouble: "For over a year Mrs. Greene had been afflicted with a very stubborn kidney trouble. An operation was advised. This I would not consent to. Foley's Kidney Pills done more to complete her recovery than any medicine she ever took and I feel it my duty to recommend Foley's Kidney Pills to all who may need kidney medicine." They are tonic in action, quick to give good results.—Evans Pharmacy, Adv.

BILL INTRODUCED WILL AID BANKS

Amount of Capital Needed to Qualify for Federal Membership Reduced

(By Associated Press)

Washington, August 26.—As a result of a conference today between members of the federal reserve board and Senators Owen, Hoke Smith and Vardaman, a bill will be introduced in congress to reduce the amount of capital necessary to qualify a state bank for membership in the federal reserve system from $25,000 to $15,000 with a provision that the capital stock must be increased to $25,000 within nine months.

Senator Overman today introduced a bill to reduce the tax on emergency currency during the first three months outstanding from three to one per cent.

The reduction of the capital required for state members of the reserve system is advocated by the southern senators as a relief for the financial stringency in the south due to failure to sell cotton abroad.

Senator Hoke Smith announced tonight that he would introduce an amendment to the currency laws to permit the issuing of currency on commercial paper to the extent of 70 per cent of its face value instead of 30 per cent as now provided by law. Another proposed amendment would reduce the annual tax on emergency currency from 6 per cent per annum to 3 per cent.

An amendment to permit domestic bills of lading to be regarded as commercial paper has been drawn by the reserve board and sent to Senator Owen. In the present law foreign acceptances are accorded this right.

JORDON CALLS CONFERENCE

Southerners Interested in Cotton Will Confront Formidable List

(By Associated Press.)

New Orleans, August 26.—A formidable list of subjects will confront Southerners interested in cotton who will meet here tomorrow for a two days' conference to decide, if possible what they believe should be done to relieve the situation brought on by the war. The conference was called by Harvie Jordan, of Atlanta, president of the Southern Cotton Association and representatives from several of the cotton growing states are expected to attend.

The subjects drawn for discussion range from ware house facilities to next season's planting and from the minimum price that spot cotton should bring this year to ocean transportation. It is the intention of those foremost in prompting the conference to have the ideas of the southerners presented to congress before any action aiming at alleviating present conditions have been taken.

AMERICANS WARLIKE

Men Volunteer Their Services to Britain for a Foreign Legion

London, Aug. 26.—Many Americans have enlisted in the foreign legion organized by Captain Ricci, who fought with Garibaldi. The services of the legion have been offered to the British war office but have not been accepted. The legion contains 3,000 men and 200 officers.

Paul and Kiffin Rockwell, brothers, young college graduates from Asheville, N. C., are among those who left today for Paris, to enlist. Before departure Paul Rockwell said:

"We came over to Europe just for a pleasure trip but made up our minds we want to fight for the allies. Belgium won our admiration by her gallant fight. France is in the thick of the fight and we want to help her out as best we can."

"We desire to get into action right away and the French army seems to be the place for us. We realize how serious the game is, but are willing, if necessary, to offer our lives for the allies."

TO DEFEND BERLIN

Germany Will Withdraw From Front Into Their Own Country.

(By Associated Press)

The Hague, August 26.—Via London.—The military correspondent of the New York Courant declares he can state on trustworthy authority that the Germans plan to abandon temporarily east and west Prussia and Pomerania to the Russians and withdraw slowly to the river Oder, where the main defenses of the Berlin lie.

"Germany," according to the correspondent, "appears to have undertaken this measure to give time to her army operating against France to try and deal the British and French armies their death blow and then to march to Paris, the distance between Moscow and Paris being four times less than the distance between St. Petersburg and Berlin."

WATERED STOCK!

(By Associated Press.)

New York, Aug. 26.—Receivers were appointed tonight for the International Steam Pump Company, a $29,000,000 corporation, by U. S. Judge Mayer. RUSSIA TELLS OF HER VICTORIES

Says the Germans Retreated in Great Disorder Abandoning Strong Positions on Frontier

(By Associated Press)

New York, August 26.—The military attaché of the Russian embassy, through the Russian consulate, tonight issued the following statement: "In Eastern Prussia on August 24, the line of the river Angerap, although fortified for defense, was abandoned by the enemy, without attempt at resistance. Insterburg and Angerburg are occupied by Russian troops. The enemy has retreated in great disorder, partly toward Koenigsburg and partly toward Rastenburg. The Russians are gradually advancing, the enemy retiring to Osterode and leaving several guns, machine guns, ammunition wagons and prisoners."

"On the left bank of the river Vistula the enemy retired from the line Plock-Lentchitzka, but farther to the south this detachment, yet undisturbed by the Russian advance, remained in the hands Lodz, Retokoff, Kamak, Random and Opstoff."

"In Calacia, the enemy, on August 23, advanced his left to the line of Annapol-Zamoscie-Kamoro; while on their right, the Austrians falling back before our advance. On the evening of August 23 the Russians took Tarnopol and strengthened their positions on the river Sere, a fluent of the river Dnestr."

"On August 24 the commander-in-chief reported to his majesty a brilliant encounter of a squadron of the Nijgorodski dragoon regiment, which attacked a detachment of German scouts of 70 picked men. Six Germans were taken prisoners; the rest were killed. The Russian dragoons had four men slightly wounded by the enemy's bullets, but none of our men was touched by the enemy's sabres."

"The Serbian army continues to be invariably successful. From the beginning of the war the Serbians have captured 43 guns, six howitzers, 86 ammunition wagons, four field hospitals, a field bakery and a large quantity of clothing, shoes and horses."

"There is no definite news from the western front of the Germans."
